

DO YOU WANT TO MEET SASQUATCH?

If you're interested in a visit with Sasquatch, check out a presentation – Sasquatch, Do You Really Want to Meet Him? – at the upcoming ExpoSure Sportsmen's and Outdoors shows.

Greg Roberts and Scott Violette will be the guest speakers for that presentation and for Sasquatch a Native History in the Sportsmen's Theater at the four ExpoSure shows.

"People are fascinated by Sasquatch and some people genuinely want to have an encounter for themselves, to see first hand in order to believe it," Roberts said. "It's human nature to see for yourself. We want to let people know it's not impossible, that it's definitely happened."

Roberts said the bulk of the Sasquatch encounters have been in the Southern Cascade Mountains and the Siskiyou Mountains. He encourages interested people to go online to bigfootmappingproject.com to learn more about Sasquatch.

"Howling doesn't work," Roberts said of that method of trying to attract the mysterious creature. "Act like a regular person, camp in the woods where there is cover. Cook hamburgers and hot dogs because the smell of cooking meat can help attract them, and at the edge of camp leave gifts like balloons and peanut butter.

"These are ways to increase your chance of an encounter," he added.

Roberts and Violette will detail their thoughts and encounters during their presentations.
